

Made on a Mac

WORK HARD and PARTY HARD

from Wed., 28. Juli to Mon., 02 August 2010

FINALLY Winter is over and Spring is here.

Half a year over - looking back: The kitchen shines in a new light and is nearing completion, the house electrics have been switched over to earth cable, we have four sheepies now and the self-made CIDER is nearly drunk, I have herbs like no tomorrow and salad in the garden and the house shines bleaky white.

Permaculture
*Or the herbs spiraling.
Trippy :)*

BUT?

We still have no eco water purification and therefore still a hole in the ground for a toilet (emptier than before, though) and no real bathroom. In summer, this is not a problem, because we are not fuzzy about things (or bathing) but in winter, we don't think so.

Birthday
Tim is 40

SO?

We needz your help again. Some strong guys to dig out a 2x3x3 m hole in a couple of days; not a problem, hey? No, jokes aside, I will hire a mini JCB so we only need an operator and everything will be fine. Really! A pond would be nice as well and a fence and plastering the outside of the house so it looks nicer because Tim says looks are very psychological (or something like that).

A miracle
The wall is white and the door dirty

FOOD AND DRINK?

Of course, there will be beer and barbecue again and I will need a cook who can prepare some proper meals but that will be the easiest bit.

MaehMaeh
The sheep are fourworth: not due to biological reasons, though.

MUSIC?

We will have some music in the evenings coming from the grammophone and the little dog, so let's get dancing WALTZER and TANGO.

Fire

-we will have again in the big basket in the yard.

Accommodation? Choose a spot. There are four buildings and a garden. Bring sleeping bag and mat.

Turn up whenever you like and stay as long as you like. Just gis a shout.
